

The notification emails you receive are generic. They may be just for an update on contracting or a notification about quotes, renewals, or policy terms.

Once logged in there is a Notifications menu at the top of the page. This lists all the locations where you received notifications sent to your email. Account Activity is a great place to start if you are looking for notifications.

Otherwise, the main page would have the rest of the normal notifications, The "None" will be replaced with a number/number for Unread notifications if you had any. An example is below the second image in this email. You may not have any of these yet, but that is where they normally would be.

An example of what a notification number would look like in this type is as follows:
